

TROUBLE SHOOTING GUIDE

LETS CHANGE THE WAY YOU THINK ABOUT LIFTING

Sometimes employees will limit their thinking and imagination and this becomes evident when they only see a wooden lifting box in the classroom, instead of a 'Load with handles'. Point out to them that many things have handles and the box represents just about anything that does have handles. These things would include children because we pick them up from under the arms. Actually, anything that you can grasp without having to tip it first, can be considered a load with handles. It follows then, that if POWERLIFT[®] made it easier on the box with handles it will surely make it easier on anything else that has handles or in other words, some place to grip as you lift it!
